ON THE DOWN-TOWN STREETS. How the Good News Was Received by

Thousands of Rejoicing People. The first returns from the precincts, last night, showed that a high rate of gain over the figures of last year was likely to ensue, and Republican spirits went up high. The crowd about the Journal office began to grow very enthusiastic, and the resounding shouts had the effect to attract thousands who had not expected returns so soon. The crowd soon reached four or five thousand, and when the returns were announced from the third-story balcony the good news was greeted with cheer upon cheer. The announcements were made by Charles Bookwalter, and his appearance was a signal for a hush over the throng. There were few precincts that did not show Denny gains, and the chances for a only thinning of the crowd was due to the Democratic element of it retiring in disgust.

The Republicans had had no opportunity to give a cheer of victory since 1888, and their pent-up enthusiasm soon took the form of noisy instruments of sound. A new device, worthy of the lower regions, was sprung upon the rejoicing crowd. It was a wheeled contrivance, embracing the principle of the "horse fiddle," but, running on wheels, could be worked without the tiring energy required when worked by hand. It was a flendish thing to make a noise, but the crowd was too happy in its exhilaration to object. Only when its infernal racket interfered with the hearing of the announcements was there any Impatience shown with it.

There were special cases of enthusiasm marking the high degree of spirit that dominated the crowd. One old colored man, whose bald pate told a story of years and of liberation from slavery by the party which he had voted for during the day, threw his cap high up in the air as he heard the reports that meant victory. His delight knew no bounds, and he was theered by the exuberant crowd.

The streets in front of the bulletins of the News and the Sentinel were also crowded, but after 10 o'clock the Sentinel crowd began to disappear. It had been compelled to endure a lot of trashy views thrown on the canvas in place of the bulletins for some time, because the bulletins were so unfavorable that they could not please the crowd. This sort of thing was kept up until there was no longer any possibility of Sullivan's election, and then the bulletin showed a sentence which quickly scattered the crowd. It read as follows:

"Denny's gains are uniform, and his election is assured by a good majority."

This was the climacteric for that crowd, which began to scatter at once for home or for Tron's saloon. The proprietor of this famous joint was the picture of distress as he stood about the front of the saloon and said nothing. No one spoke to him and he spoke to no one. In addition to his hopes for a continued good trade in his illicit business he had bet heavily and was out a mint of money. He had also contributed heavily to the campaign fund to corrupt the ballot, and had only defeat and rebuke for his pains. His saloon, however, did a good business, for his friends soon began to try to drown their sorrow in drink.

The enthusiasm of the crowd, when once assured that Denny was elected, could not be content with standing still, but must get up a march. A detachment of the Columbia Club secured the Indianapolis Military Band and organized a procession. with the national colors and the beautiful banner of the club flying proudly in the breezes. It wound its way with difficulty through the great crowds in front of the Journal office and on Washington street. The procession made a detour of the streets, taking in the Sentinel on its way. The example was followed by a number of other crowds, who kept up the parading with bass drums and fifes until a late hour.

Petrie, of Minneapolis, Minn., presented the report of the Swedish Home Mission Board, which shows that not less than 65,000 Swedes have come to this country since the last report, and fifty pastors have been added to the working force of the synod. The work of the board extends over the entire country. Its receipts were $33,335.57. The report of the immigrant mission in New York shows that important work has been done among the thousands who annually come to this country. The receipts for this work amounted to $3,624.14. and the receipts for work on Ellis island and sick immigrants were $529.16. On motion it was resolved that Epiphany Sunday of each year be set apart for special services in the congregations and Sunday schools in the interest of foreign missions.

TIME TO CALL A HALT

General Harrison on the Bill to at hand, as their opponents were beginning to be unmasked, and all their dead leader's Repeal Election Laws.

He Says the People Will Not Submit to the Choice of Their Officials by the Dice Box.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. CHICAGO, Oct. 10 .- Ex-President Benjamin Harrison arrived in the city at 9 o'clock this evening to attend the national meeting of the Loyal Legion. Over his after-dinner cigar in his room at the Grand Pacific Hotel Mr. Harrison chatted freely about the repeal in the House of Representatives to-day of the federal election laws. "We are sowing the seed of discord," he said, "in breaking away from the national election law. The people of this country will not submit to the choice of their officials by the dice box or the juggler's hat. Above all this we must have pure elections. I did, in my message to Congress, say nearly all that could be said upon this necessity. Our elections must be above suspicion of taint or fraud. Citizens will not respect officials whose selections are questioned or known to have been secured by palpable and open fraud. "I believe that every citizen should bee protected in his right of suffrage to the extent of being permitted to vote his political preference and to have his vote counted as cast. If the present federal election law is repealed by Congress all federal control and supervision of the election of national officers is withdrawn, and local sentiment and local laws will govern such elections. I am not partial to any particular federal election law, except that that law should provide for some judicial method of inquiry. "That the colored vote in the South is suppressed or counted out is a notorious fact. Take for instance the State of Tennessee. Had I received as many votes in the five black counties in West Tennessee in 1888 as Mr. Blaine received in the same counties in 1884 I would have secured the electoral vote of Tennessee by a majority of 5,000 or 6,000. The frauds in that section were so palrable that the district attorney had many of the election officers indicted before the federal court at Memphis. In honest elections lies our national safety, and we cannot tolerate fraud in elections without paying a bitter price in

TIRED OF GLADSTONE

Parnellites Will No Longer Support the Premier's Policy.

Leader Redmond Springs a Political Sensation-English Miners to Resume Work.

DUBLIN, Oct. 10 .- A speech made last night at the Parnellite meeting held in the Rotunda here by Mr. John Redmond, the Parnellite leader and member of Parliament for Waterford, has caused a sensation here and throughout political circles in Great Britain, for it indicates clearly that the Parnellites will no longer support Mr. Gladstone or his policy. Mr. Redmond discussed the home-rule situation, and remarked that the whole question had undergone a fatal change. Continuing, Mr. Redmond said that the situation they had met to consider was one of deadly peril to Irishmen. The home-rule question had been hung up by the Liberal party in Parliament, and the Independent Nationalists who consented to submit to the rejection of the home-rule bill were either fools or slaves. Continuing, Mr. Redmond said that the Irish cause at the present moment was men aced by a deadly peril, which was the in-evitable result of the Nationalists' surren-der to the English. The late Charles Stewart Parnell's prediction was fully justified said Mr. Redmond. There was no use in deceiving the Irish people into the belief that the British people who had taken up home rule acted from any other motive home rule acted from any other motive than necessity, and only when they realized that British interests were imperiled. The danger, the speaker claimed, lay in the fact that Ireland no longer blocked the way. The Liberals, according to Mr. Redmond, had hung up home rule for an entire year, until 1594 at least, and now they intended to proceed to consideration of English reforms without having settled with Ireland. Thus, Mr. Redmond added, was a large part of Mr. Parnell's life work undone, and home rule would disappear for a generation or rule would disappear for a generation or more. Moreover, he continued, what kind of home rule did Mr. Gladstone offer? The bill of last session, the speaker claimed was dead, and the next one would undoubt-In conclusion Mr Redmond made def-inite announcement to the effect that at the coming session of Farliament he and his followers would decline to follow the government to a division in the lobbles on English questions. This statement of Mr. Redmond was greeted by loud and prolonged cheering upon the part of the audience assembled in the Rotunda. When Mr. Redmond was able to proceed he said that he believed the Parnellites' opportunity was at hand, as their opponents were beginning predictions would be verified. (Loud ap-

The Parnellites then passed resolutions to the effect that the refusal of the government to consider at the autumn session a measure to reinstate evicted tenants in Ireland, its refusal to release Irish political prisoners, and Mr. Gladstone's failure at Edinburgh, recently, to define his intentions in regard to the Irish question, indicated the policy he intended to follow in regard to home rule. All this, it was claimed, necessitates that immediate action upon the cessitates that immediate action upor the part of the Irish party is necessary, and that a reorganization of that party throughout the country should be one of the first steps taken. The audience dispersed with loud cheers for Mr. Redmond and for home rule.

COLLERIES TO BE OPENED.

England's Great Coal-Miners' Strike Probably Ended. LONDON, Oct. 10 .- The Warwick colliery owners have accepted a suggestion of the Mayors of Leeds, Sheffield, Bradford, Nottingham, Derby and Barnsley made at the private conference yesterday between the coal mine owners, representatives of the striking miners and the mayors referred to. The latter suggested that the miners should submit the strike question to a general bal-lot of the miners, and that the mine owners should allow their men to resume work at the old wages with a reduction of 10 per cent. of the 40 per cent. advance in their pay, which they have received since 1888. The mine owners agreed to refer this suggestion to an executive meeting of the proprietors to be held to-day. The proposals of the Mayors also provide for the appoint-ment of a tribunal of conciliation to deal with the question of wages, and that in view of severe distress now existing among the miners the colliery owners should make money advances to their men, these to be repaid in weekly installments. The representatives of the miners, on the other hand, accepted the suggestions which the Mayors made to them. In substance, these suggestions were that they were to submit the strike question to a general ballot of miners, the result of which balloting is expected to be known within a week. The time fixed for the resumption of work was six weeks hence, it being estimated that it would take that time to put the pits in thorough working order, but the Warwick colliery owners have decided to reopen their pits immediately, and it is expected that other mine owners will cromptly follow their example. News that several other collieries have decided to accept the suggestions of the Mayors was received here this evening which indicates that England's great coal miners' strike is about at American Flint Glass Workers Will Fight for Their Union.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 10 .- A general strike of the American flint glass workers has been ordered, and will take effect at once.
